The case of the pirates of the schooner Jos. L. Gerety had been agreed upon by the magistrate at Liverpool. Application was made for a further remand. It was opposed on behalf of the American Government, but the magistrate granted the demand, and stated his intention to remand the case from time to time until the opinion of a superior court was pronounced. Application was made in the case to one of the Judges at the Liverpool Assizes, but he declined to interfere in the matter.

The London Post says: Five hundred thousand pounds of cotton are stated to be now in the hands of the Confederate Government, while 260,000 bales would suffice to pay off the whole loan. A large amount of bonds has already been delivered, and cotton received in exchange, according to agreement. There is apprehension that the facility for running the blockade will be increased, and the difference between the amount of cotton in the Southern ports and that obtained for it in Liverpool may stimulate the purchase of bonds. Indeed, the principal buying for the last week has been in Liverpool account. These are, also, as we have before stated, other negotiations in progress, to which we shall probably before long have again to refer.
